

Abstract

The present invention relates to the use of angiotensin in a method for the treatment or prevention of cancer. The method comprises administering to a patient in need of treatment an effective amount of an angiotensin.